

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF SOCIAL WORKERS OF UGANDA - (NASWU)

ETHICAL CODE OF CONDUCT

P.O Box 35388, Kampala - Uganda,
Plot 693, Kalungu Off soya Road Bunga
Office: +256 312 517 440 | 0774 095920
Email: naswu2014@gmail.com, Website: www.naswu.org

Clients must have the right to refuse or withdraw consent

Clients' decisions must be based on adequate information

Oppression - refers disadvantage, marginalization and injustice some groups of people experience as part of their everyday life. It involves the devaluation of people's attributes and contributions to society on the grounds of who they are as members of a group socially configured as inferior.

Social Justice - refers to the concept of a society in which justice is achieved in every aspect of society, rather than merely through the administration of law. It is generally considered as a social world which affords individuals and groups fair treatment, equality and an impartial share of the benefits of membership of society.

Values - Professional values are a particular grouping and ordering of values within a professional context. In social work such values tend to focus on human functioning, capabilities and development.

About NASWU

The National Association of Social Workers of Uganda (NASWU) is a fully subscribed member of the International Federation of Social Workers (IFSW) and an independent professional body under Ministry of Gender, Labour and Social Development working for the advancement of Social Work in Uganda. NASWU's overall aim is to promote and facilitate Social Welfare and Social Development in Uganda. NASWU strives to promote professional practice, national development and social transformation.

NASWU's Vision

A community without social problems.

NASWU's Aim

Promote and facilitate Social Welfare and Social Development in Uganda.

NASWU's Core Values

Human Rights
Social Justice
Professional Integrity
Ethical Practice

Clients must have the right to refuse or withdraw consent

Clients' decisions must be based on adequate information

Oppression - refers disadvantage, marginalization and injustice some groups of people experience as part of their everyday life. It involves the devaluation of people's attributes and contributions to society on the grounds of who they are as members of a group socially configured as inferior.

Social Justice - refers to the concept of a society in which justice is achieved in every aspect of society, rather than merely through the administration of law. It is generally considered as a social world which affords individuals and groups fair treatment, equality and an impartial share of the benefits of membership of society.

Values - Professional values are a particular grouping and ordering of values within a professional context. In social work such values tend to focus on human functioning, capabilities and development.

About NASWU

The National Association of Social Workers of Uganda (NASWU) is a fully subscribed member of the International Federation of Social Workers (IFSW) and an independent professional body under Ministry of Gender, Labour and Social Development working for the advancement of Social Work in Uganda. NASWU's overall aim is to promote and facilitate Social Welfare and Social Development in Uganda. NASWU strives to promote professional practice, national development and social transformation.

NASWU's Vision

A community without social problems.

NASWU's Aim

Promote and facilitate Social Welfare and Social Development in Uganda.

NASWU's Core Values

Human Rights
Social Justice
Professional Integrity
Ethical Practice

Foreword

The National Association of Social Workers of Uganda recognizes that at the centre of any meaningful transformation of the communities is the need for empowered, competent and morally upright work force. It is in light of this that the Association has put in place a set of ethical codes of conduct to regulate and guide the behavior of practicing Social Workers in Uganda. This code of conduct is therefore an aspiration of the Social Workers of Uganda to attain the highest level professional practice standard and offer best quality service to their clients, and serve as good example to the rest of the development practitioners within and outside Social Work domain.

I urge all the members of the Association to acquire, use and demonstrate the spirit of the Social Work code of conduct in their day to day work and life. The content of this code of conduct is relevant to the current Social Workers, as it will be for future generations to come.

Together we can demonstrate through our actions, conduct and practice that indeed Social Work is a noble profession that has stood the test of time and shall continue to be so. We strive to empower individuals and transforming communities for a better and meaningful life.

Byamukama Michael Ntanda
President - NASWU

something about another's needs.

Confidentiality - means respecting private and personal information, unless there are overriding ethical reasons for not doing so.

Culture - means the distinctive ways of life and shared values, beliefs and meanings common to groups of people.

Discrimination - negative discrimination means prejudging and unfavorable treatment of people on the basis of perceived difference. Positive discrimination refers to policies, programs or actions that favor disadvantaged persons or groups.

Corruption - means misusing one's office for a private gain or unofficial end. It involves both a monetary and non-monetary benefits. Examples include bribery, extortion, influence peddling, nepotism, scams, fraud, and opportunism etc. Usually, the very work environment and culture foster of discourage corrupt practices.

Human rights - refer to the basic rights and freedoms to which all humans are entitled. They are socially sanctioned entitlements to the goods and services that are necessary to develop human potential and well-being.

Informed consent - In general, for consent to be valid following factors must be met:

- Coercion and undue influence must not have played a role in the Client's decision
- Clients must be mentally capable of providing consent
- Clients must consent to specific procedures or actions
- The consent forms and procedures must be valid

Foreword

The National Association of Social Workers of Uganda recognizes that at the centre of any meaningful transformation of the communities is the need for empowered, competent and morally upright work force. It is in light of this that the Association has put in place a set of ethical codes of conduct to regulate and guide the behavior of practicing Social Workers in Uganda. This code of conduct is therefore an aspiration of the Social Workers of Uganda to attain the highest level professional practice standard and offer best quality service to their clients, and serve as good example to the rest of the development practitioners within and outside Social Work domain.

I urge all the members of the Association to acquire, use and demonstrate the spirit of the Social Work code of conduct in their day to day work and life. The content of this code of conduct is relevant to the current Social Workers, as it will be for future generations to come.

Together we can demonstrate through our actions, conduct and practice that indeed Social Work is a noble profession that has stood the test of time and shall continue to be so. We strive to empower individuals and transforming communities for a better and meaningful life.

Byamukama Michael Ntanda
President - NASWU

something about another's needs.

Confidentiality - means respecting private and personal information, unless there are overriding ethical reasons for not doing so.

Culture - means the distinctive ways of life and shared values, beliefs and meanings common to groups of people.

Discrimination - negative discrimination means prejudging and unfavorable treatment of people on the basis of perceived difference. Positive discrimination refers to policies, programs or actions that favor disadvantaged persons or groups.

Corruption - means misusing one's office for a private gain or unofficial end. It involves both a monetary and non-monetary benefits. Examples include bribery, extortion, influence peddling, nepotism, scams, fraud, and opportunism etc. Usually, the very work environment and culture foster of discourage corrupt practices.

Human rights - refer to the basic rights and freedoms to which all humans are entitled. They are socially sanctioned entitlements to the goods and services that are necessary to develop human potential and well-being .

Informed consent - In general, for consent to be valid following factors must be met:

- Coercion and undue influence must not have played a role in the Client's decision
- Clients must be mentally capable of providing consent
- Clients must consent to specific procedures or actions
- The consent forms and procedures must be valid

Neither support nor take part in any form of illegal, exploitative or abusive activities including for example prostitution, child labour, trafficking of human beings and intoxicants.

Dress appropriately and shall be in dress which is decent and smart

Attend to his or her personal appearance, ensuring a neat and pleasant outlook while in discharge of duties.

Avoid political influence or peddling in the course of exercising their duty. Practicing social workers will keep their political opinions to themselves or if they are politicians will avoid using social work profession to advance their interests. However, social worker will challenge activities or policies of government in advocating for social justice for clients.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

Advocacy - means activities associated with negotiating or representing on behalf of a person.

Autonomy - means the power of a person to act (1) freely and intentionally; (2) with substantial understanding, and (3) without controlling powers forcing them to choose to act in one way rather than another. The term 'self-determination has a similar meaning.

Client - means a person, families, groups, communities, organizations or a legal entity seeking social work services voluntarily or involuntarily.

Competence - This is about care-giving, the actual work of care that needs to be done. It means one's ability to do

Neither support nor take part in any form of illegal, exploitative or abusive activities including for example prostitution, child labour, trafficking of human beings and intoxicants.

Dress appropriately and shall be in dress which is decent and smart

Attend to his or her personal appearance, ensuring a neat and pleasant outlook while in discharge of duties.

Avoid political influence or peddling in the course of exercising their duty. Practicing social workers will keep their political opinions to themselves or if they are politicians will avoid using social work profession to advance their interests. However, social worker will challenge activities or policies of government in advocating for social justice for clients.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

Advocacy - means activities associated with negotiating or representing on behalf of a person.

Autonomy - means the power of a person to act (1) freely and intentionally; (2) with substantial understanding, and (3) without controlling powers forcing them to choose to act in one way rather than another. The term 'self-determination has a similar meaning.

Client - means a person, families, groups, communities, organizations or a legal entity seeking social work services voluntarily or involuntarily.

Competence - This is about care-giving, the actual work of care that needs to be done. It means one's ability to do

1.0 Preamble

This code of conduct covers the minimum professional behavior, integrity and behavior that govern social work profession in Uganda. It is intended to serve as a guide to everyday conduct of members of National Association of Social Workers of Uganda (NASWU) in exercise of social work profession and as basis for adjudication of issues in conduct when the behavior of social worker(s) is alleged to deviate from the standards set in this code. It represents standards of behavior for social workers in professional relationship with clients, colleagues, employers, other individuals and professions and with community and society as a whole.

The NASWU capacity to ensure the protection and assistance of clients depends on the ability of our members to uphold and promote the highest standards of professional conduct. The members of NASWU are personally and collectively responsible for maintaining these standards and expected to act in accordance with the principles and values stated in NASWU's constitution and this code of conduct. It forms an integral part NASWU's membership and social work practice in Uganda.

1.1 Commitment and aim of code of conduct.

NASWU recognizes that social work is about empowering individuals and transforming communities through service provision. Social Workers have an obligation to their clients, to their employees, to one another, to colleagues in other

1.0 Preamble

This code of conduct covers the minimum professional behavior, integrity and behavior that govern social work profession in Uganda. It is intended to serve as a guide to everyday conduct of members of National Association of Social Workers of Uganda (NASWU) in exercise of social work profession and as basis for adjudication of issues in conduct when the behavior of social worker(s) is alleged to deviate from the standards set in this code. It represents standards of behavior for social workers in professional relationship with clients, colleagues, employers, other individuals and professions and with community and society as a whole.

The NASWU capacity to ensure the protection and assistance of clients depends on the ability of our members to uphold and promote the highest standards of professional conduct. The members of NASWU are personally and collectively responsible for maintaining these standards and expected to act in accordance with the principles and values stated in NASWU's constitution and this code of conduct. It forms an integral part NASWU's membership and social work practice in Uganda.

1.1 Commitment and aim of code of conduct.

NASWU recognizes that social work is about empowering individuals and transforming communities through service provision. Social Workers have an obligation to their clients, to their employees, to one another, to colleagues in other disciplines and to society. As a professional association of social workers in Uganda, NASWU has a duty to ensure that its members discharge their obligations to safeguard and promote the rights of clients. The primary aim of this code is to state the values, principles and responsibilities which are fundamental in social work.

1.2 Definition of social work

The social work profession promotes social change, problem solving in human relationships and empowerment and liberation of people to enhance wellbeing. Utilizing theories of human behavior and social systems, social work intervenes at the point where people interact with their environment. Principles of human rights and social justice are fundamental to social work".

Social work addresses multiple, complex dealings between people and their environments. Its mission is to enable all people to develop their full potential, enrich their lives and prevent dysfunction. Professional social work is focused on problem solving and change. As such, social workers are change agents in society and in the lives of individuals, families and communities they serve. Social work is an interrelated system of values, theory and practice.

1.3 Who is the code of conduct for?

This code of conduct is binding on all registered members of NASWU, persons who are social workers by qualification and training and are practicing social work, all persons who disciplines and to society. As a professional association of social workers in Uganda, NASWU has a duty to ensure that its members discharge their obligations to safeguard and promote the rights of clients. The primary aim of this code is to state the values, principles and responsibilities which are fundamental in social work.

1.2 Definition of social work

The social work profession promotes social change, problem solving in human relationships and empowerment and liberation of people to enhance wellbeing. Utilizing theories of human behavior and social systems, social work intervenes at the point where people interact with their environment. Principles of human rights and social justice are fundamental to social work".

Social work addresses multiple, complex dealings between people and their environments. Its mission is to enable all people to develop their full potential, enrich their lives and prevent dysfunction. Professional social work is focused on problem solving and change. As such, social workers are change agents in society and in the lives of individuals, families and communities they serve. Social work is an interrelated system of values, theory and practice.

1.3 Who is the code of conduct for?

This code of conduct is binding on all registered members of NASWU, persons who are social workers by qualification and training and are practicing social work, all persons who

To work for the acceptance by the employers of the values and principles and requirements of the code of conduct.

To ensure that staff under their direction receive continuing training and professional education and seek adequate resources to meet staff development needs.

To promote equality policies and practices and advocate for resources to meet clients' needs.

Endeavor to have conflicts resolved in a way that maintains the quality and integrity of the service provided to clients when a conflict arises between the social worker and their employees or among social workers themselves.

Promote effective team work and communication in the institution or organization.

4.4.2 Reporting misconduct

Serious negligence, unethical behavior or misconduct by registered or non-registered social workers should always be brought to the attention of National Executive Committee or Branch Executive Committee of NASWU

4.5 Alcohol, Criminal and other Unethical activities.

The Social worker will:

Have no involvement in criminal and unethical activities that contravene human rights, or activities that compromise the image and interest of NASWU.

Exercise care with alcohol and will refrain from/avoid using intoxicating substances, including alcohol while on duty.

To work for the acceptance by the employers of the values and principles and requirements of the code of conduct.

To ensure that staff under their direction receive continuing training and professional education and seek adequate resources to meet staff development needs.

To promote equality policies and practices and advocate for resources to meet clients' needs.

Endeavor to have conflicts resolved in a way that maintains the quality and integrity of the service provided to clients when a conflict arises between the social worker and their employees or among social workers themselves.

Promote effective team work and communication in the institution or organization.

4.4.2 Reporting misconduct

Serious negligence, unethical behavior or misconduct by registered or non-registered social workers should always be brought to the attention of National Executive Committee or Branch Executive Committee of NASWU

4.5 Alcohol, Criminal and other Unethical activities.

The Social worker will:

Have no involvement in criminal and unethical activities that contravene human rights, or activities that compromise the image and interest of NASWU.

Exercise care with alcohol and will refrain from/avoid using intoxicating substances, including alcohol while on duty.

can arise in relation to involuntary clients, multiple clients and confidentiality issues. At all times, clients' interest remain a priority with due consideration of respective interests of others.

Where such a situation may arise, social workers will declare their interest to the relevant parties. If already involved in a professional relationship when the conflict of interest arises, social workers will declare it and take appropriate action such as consulting with a senior person. This may result in negotiating the professional relationship or terminating it and referring appropriately. Social workers will not give or accept gifts which may impair professional judgment, affect the integrity or efficacy of the professional relationship

Social workers will refuse to accept or will refer cases where it is not possible to manage conflicts of interest.

4.3 Cultural awareness

Social workers will:

Acknowledge the importance of culture in their practice and appreciate cultural diversities and cultural identities. Use a language the client can understand and only in exceptional circumstances that use a different language with help of qualified interpreter where appropriate.

4.4 Responsibilities at work place

4.4.1 Social Workers in positions of responsibility

Social workers in positions of responsibility will observe the following ethical responsibilities

can arise in relation to involuntary clients, multiple clients and confidentiality issues. At all times, clients' interest remain a priority with due consideration of respective interests of others.

Where such a situation may arise, social workers will declare their interest to the relevant parties. If already involved in a professional relationship when the conflict of interest arises, social workers will declare it and take appropriate action such as consulting with a senior person. This may result in negotiating the professional relationship or terminating it and referring appropriately. Social workers will not give or accept gifts which may impair professional judgment, affect the integrity or efficacy of the professional relationship.

Social workers will refuse to accept or will refer cases where it is not possible to manage conflicts of interest.

4.3 Cultural awareness

Social workers will:

Acknowledge the importance of culture in their practice and appreciate cultural diversities and cultural identities. Use a language the client can understand and only in exceptional circumstances that use a different language with help of qualified interpreter where appropriate.

4.4 Responsibilities at work place

4.4.1 Social Workers in positions of responsibility

Social workers in positions of responsibility will observe the following ethical responsibilities are not (trained and qualified social workers but are practicing social work in various institutions/organization;s it also includes social work training institutions, and institutions providing social work services.

1.4 Interpretation of code of conduct

NASWU is aware that this code cannot prescribe in detail every behavior expected of a professional social worker. However, the code must be interpreted in the wider context noted above, taking into account the balance of responsibilities between employers and their professional staff and in individual circumstances.

2.0 Values and Principles of social work

In response to executing and achieving NASWU aims in Uganda, it is committed to four core values from which emanate responsibilities and principles. These core values are;

- Human Rights
- Social Justice
- Professional Integrity
- Ethical Practice

Social work practice should promote respect for human dignity by upholding social justice, service provision to clients with integrity and competence.

2.1 Human dignity and worth

The social work profession holds that every human being has intrinsic and equal worth. Hence each person has a right are not (trained and qualified social workers but are practicing social work in various institutions/organization;s it also includes social work training institutions, and institutions providing social work services.

1.4 Interpretation of code of conduct

NASWU is aware that this code cannot prescribe in detail every behavior expected of a professional social worker. However, the code must be interpreted in the wider context noted above, taking into account the balance of responsibilities between employers and their professional staff and in individual circumstances.

2.0 Values and Principles of social work

In response to executing and achieving NASWU aims in Uganda, it is committed to four core values from which emanate responsibilities and principles. These core values are;

- Human Rights
- Social Justice
- Professional Integrity
- Ethical Practice

Social work practice should promote respect for human dignity by upholding social justice, service provision to clients with integrity and competence.

2.1 Human dignity and worth

The social work profession holds that every human being has intrinsic and equal worth. Hence each person has a right to wellbeing , self-fulfillment and self-determination, consistent with the right to culture of others.

2.2 Social Justice

The social work profession holds that social justice is a core obligation which societies should uphold. Societies should strive to afford protection and provide maximum benefit for all their members. These include:

Fair and equitable distribution of resources to meet basic needs

Fair access to public services and benefits, to achieve human potential

Recognition of their rights and duties of individual, families, groups and communities

Equal treatment and protection under the law

Social development and environmental management in the interests of present and future human welfare.

The pursuit of social justice involves identifying, seeking to alleviate and advocating strategies for overcoming structural disadvantage.

2.3 Professional integrity

The social work profession values evidence based practice, honesty, transparency , reliability, empathy, reflective self-awareness, discernment, competence and commitment.

supervisor's or employer's attention. Unless a resolution is possible, the relationship with the client should be terminated with appropriate referral being made.

Respond to complaints in a professional manner and implement changes to practice as necessary to address any issues raised in complaints.

Social worker will provide timely response and feedback to the clients while doing professional work.

4.0 Other Ethical Practice and responsibilities

4.1 Commitment to competence and development

Social workers will ensure that their practice skills and knowledge are improved and updated through continuous professional development and advancement in order to provide quality service.

Social workers will undertake practice only within their areas of competence or where training/ supervision pertinent to their work role is available or accessible.

Contribute to education and training of colleagues and students, sharing knowledge and practice wisdom.

Recognize the limits of their competence and advice employers and clients when referral to a more appropriate professional is recommended.

4.2 Conflict of interest

Social workers will remain aware of the potential for conflicts of interest which may affect their ability to exercise professional discretion and unbiased judgment. Social workers will be mindful that conflicts of interest to wellbeing , self-fulfillment and self-determination, consistent with the right to culture of others.

2.2 Social Justice

The social work profession holds that social justice is a core obligation which societies should uphold. Societies should strive to afford protection and provide maximum benefit for all their members. These include:

Fair and equitable distribution of resources to meet basic needs

Fair access to public services and benefits, to achieve human potential

Recognition of their rights and duties of individual, families, groups and communities

Equal treatment and protection under the law

Social development and environmental management in the interests of present and future human welfare.

The pursuit of social justice involves identifying, seeking to alleviate and advocating strategies for overcoming structural disadvantage.

2.3 Professional integrity

The social work profession values evidence based practice, honesty, transparency, reliability, empathy, reflective self-awareness, discernment, competence and commitment.

supervisor 's or employer 's attention. Unless a resolution is possible, the relationship with the client should be terminated with appropriate referral being made.

Respond to complaints in a professional manner and implement changes to practice as necessary to address any issues raised in complaints.

Social worker will provide timely response and feedback to the clients while doing professional work.

4.0 Other Ethical Practice and responsibilities

4.1 Commitment to competence and development

Social workers will ensure that their practice skills and knowledge are improved and updated through continuous professional development and advancement in order to provide quality service.

Social workers will undertake practice only within their areas of competence or where training/ supervision pertinent to their work role is available or accessible.

Contribute to education and training of colleagues and students, sharing knowledge and practice wisdom.

Recognize the limits of their competence and advice employers and clients when referral to a more appropriate professional is recommended.

4.2 Conflict of interest

Social workers will remain aware of the potential for conflicts of interest which may affect their ability to exercise professional discretion and unbiased judgment. Social workers will be mindful that conflicts of interest opportunities as well as any obligations and risks associated with the provision of the services.

Not enter into sexual relationship with the client. This applies to a client's family or relative of former client, when there is a risk the relationship will adversely affect the services provided to the client and/or the social worker's ability to fulfill his or her professional obligations.

Not become a party to any conduct, as a supervisor or educator, with supervisees or social work students that could compromise the supervisee's or student's professional role with the client.

Not in any way harass a client nor encourage or condone any form of harassment by others towards any client or colleague.

Avoid abusive or offensive language to clients, colleagues or management. Treat every human being humanely.

Act to redress harassment against a client or colleague in circumstances when this becomes known.

Discuss an alternative means of providing the client with high quality service, should the situation arise where the social worker by virtue of his physical, emotional or mental impairment or limitation be unable to provide an appropriate level of service.

Discuss potential or actual conflict of interest (either personal or professional) with the client and attempt to resolve them expeditiously. The social worker should bring any potential or actual conflict of interest to their opportunities as well as any obligations and risks associated with the provision of the services.

Not enter into sexual relationship with the client. This applies to a client's family or relative of former client, when there is a risk the relationship will adversely affect the services provided to the client and/or the social worker's ability to fulfill his or her professional obligations.

Not become a party to any conduct, as a supervisor or educator, with supervisees or social work students that could compromise the supervisee's or student's professional role with the client.

Not in any way harass a client nor encourage or condone any form of harassment by others towards any client or colleague.

Avoid abusive or offensive language to clients, colleagues or management. Treat every human being humanely.

Act to redress harassment against a client or colleague in circumstances when this becomes known.

Discuss an alternative means of providing the client with high quality service, should the situation arise where the social worker by virtue of his physical, emotional or mental impairment or limitation be unable to provide an appropriate level of service.

Discuss potential or actual conflict of interest (either personal or professional) with the client and attempt to resolve them expeditiously. The social worker should bring any potential or actual conflict of interest to their

3.0 Duties and responsibilities to the respective principles

3.1 Respect for human dignity and worth

Social workers have a duty to:

Respect basic human rights as expressed in the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), other international conventions derived from this declaration and the Constitution of Uganda.

Respect the worth and dignity of clients and not discriminate on basis of age, beliefs, culture, gender, marital status, family statuses, intellectual, psychological and physical abilities, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, political ideology, and social and economic status of clients.

Uphold and promote civil and legal rights of the clients where possible

3.1.1 Priority of Client's interest

Social workers will maintain the best interest of clients as a priority with due regard to respective interest of others.

In exceptional cases, the priority of clients' interests may be outweighed by the interests of others or legal requirements and conditions. In such situations clients will be made aware that their interests or those of others may be jeopardized.

Social workers will seek to safeguard the rights, interests and safety of clients who have limited or impaired decision-making capacity or when acting on their behalf or when

3.0 Duties and responsibilities to the respective principles

3.1 Respect for human dignity and worth

Social workers have a duty to:

Respect basic human rights as expressed in the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), other international conventions derived from this declaration and the Constitution of Uganda.

Respect the worth and dignity of clients and not discriminate on basis of age, beliefs, culture, gender, marital status, family statuses, intellectual, psychological and physical abilities, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, political ideology, and social and economic status of clients.

Uphold and promote civil and legal rights of the clients where possible

3.1.1 Priority of Client's interest

Social workers will maintain the best interest of clients as a priority with due regard to respective interest of others.

In exceptional cases, the priority of clients' interests may be outweighed by the interests of others or legal requirements and conditions. In such situations clients will be made aware that their interests or those of others may be jeopardized.

Social workers will seek to safeguard the rights, interests and safety of clients who have limited or impaired decision-making capacity or when acting on their behalf or when another person whether legally authorized or not is acting for the client.

Social workers will collaborate with other professionals and service providers in the interests of clients, maintaining their privacy, and with clients' knowledge and consent whenever possible. Social workers will recognize the clients' rights to self-determination in this regard and where possible include clients in such consultations.

3.1.2 Self determination

Social workers will support and facilitate clients to reach informed decision about their lives and promote their autonomy, provided that this does not conflict with their safety or with rights of others.

If the client's circumstances limit the possibility of self-determination the social worker must, where possible protect the client's rights and welfare in any dealings with others who have legal responsibility for the client.

Avoid compulsion unless there is a clear professional or legal justification for such a course of action.

3.1.3 Confidentiality, privacy and use of information

Social workers will respect the right of clients to a relationship of trust and confidentiality of their information and to responsible use of information obtained in the course of professional service. This includes:

Obtaining informed consent from clients or their authorized

another person whether legally authorized or not is acting for the client.

Social workers will collaborate with other professionals and service providers in the interests of clients, maintaining their privacy, and with clients' knowledge and consent whenever possible. Social workers will recognize the clients' rights to self-determination in this regard and where possible include clients in such consultations.

3.1.2 Self determination

Social workers will support and facilitate clients to reach informed decision about their lives and promote their autonomy, provided that this does not conflict with their safety or with rights of others.

If the client's circumstances limit the possibility of self-determination the social worker must, where possible protect the client's rights and welfare in any dealings with others who have legal responsibility for the client.

Avoid compulsion unless there is a clear professional or legal justification for such a course of action.

3.1.3 Confidentiality, privacy and use of information

Social workers will respect the right of clients to a relationship of trust and confidentiality of their information and to responsible use of information obtained in the course of professional service. This includes:

Obtaining informed consent from clients or their authorized

Institutions/organizations that are taking care of special clients such as orphans, elderly and disabled will provide safe, conducive and hygienic environment i.e. provide acceptable facilities as defined by conditions/standards set by NASWU.

Institutions/organizations that are taking care of special clients such as orphans, elderly and disabled will ensure that qualified social workers are employed to attend and provide services to clients.

3.3 Professional integrity

Social workers must adhere to maintaining a high code of behavior, honesty, trustworthiness, being respectful, and having a sense of justice and fairness, personal character. Since integrity is associated with all the above, ones' reputation is extremely difficult to recover once it is damaged.

Social worker therefore will:

Refrain from any professional behavior that puts at risk the individual's and/or the profession's reputation and compromises the social worker 's ability to work with the client in a fully professional and caring manner.

Not indulge in corruption tendencies or exploit their relationship with clients for personal gain.

Provide the client with honest and factual information about the social worker's professional qualifications and experience.

Provide the client with details of the extent and nature of the services to be provided by the social worker and their urgency and give details of the client's rights and

Institutions/organizations that are taking care of special clients such as orphans, elderly and disabled will provide safe, conducive and hygienic environment i.e. provide acceptable facilities as defined by conditions/standards set by NASWU.

Institutions/organizations that are taking care of special clients such as orphans, elderly and disabled will ensure that qualified social workers are employed to attend and provide services to clients.

3.3 Professional integrity

Social workers must adhere to maintaining a high code of behavior, honesty, trustworthiness, being respectful, and having a sense of justice and fairness, personal character. Since integrity is associated with all the above, ones' reputation is extremely difficult to recover once it is damaged.

Social worker therefore will:

Refrain from any professional behavior that puts at risk the individual's and/or the profession's reputation and compromises the social worker 's ability to work with the client in a fully professional and caring manner.

Not indulge in corruption tendencies or exploit their relationship with clients for personal gain.

Provide the client with honest and factual information about the social worker 's professional qualifications and experience.

Provide the client with details of the extent and nature of the services to be provided by the social worker and their urgency and give details of the client's rights and

and liberate vulnerable and oppressed people in order to promote social inclusion.

The Social Worker:

Will use professional knowledge and experience to contribute to policy development.

Will apply knowledge and skills in ways that prioritize needs of others over personal gain.

Will responsibly use power and authority in ways that serve humanity. Bring to the attention of those in power and the general public, and where appropriate challenge ways, policies or activities of government, organizations or society that create structural disadvantages, hardships and suffering.

Will seek to change social structures which perpetuate inequalities and injustices and whenever possible work to eliminate all violations of human rights.

Will promote social fairness and equitable distribution of resources, aiming to minimize barriers and expand choice and potential for clients especially those who are disadvantaged, vulnerable or oppressed, or who have exceptional needs.

Will challenge the abuse of power for suppression and excluding people from decisions which affect them.

Will promote public participation in societal processes and decisions in the development and implementation of social policies and services,

3.2.1 Social work Institutions/organizations .

representatives to use this information, even if the information is legally required

Determining to whom clients wish such information to be given or not to be given, in what detail and in what circumstances.

Determining from whom information about clients may be requested

Treating information obtained from relatives or others about clients in the same confidential manner as clients' information.

Social workers will use confidential information only for the purpose for which it was acquired; or, with the written consent of the client, for a directly related purpose; or with lawful excuse (e.g. court or statutory requirement.)

Social workers will ensure clients' anonymity and remove identifying details when permitted to use confidential information for purposes such as case presentation, consultation, teaching, research or education.

Respect the clients right to privacy and other confidentiality of any information provided in the course of the professional relationship

Inform the client of the extent to which any other professionals or employees will be able to access client's records

Inform the client about the extent of confidentiality and the uses of which the information held by the social worker may be put e.g. for compelling legal, ethical, or

and liberate vulnerable and oppressed people in order to promote social inclusion.

The Social Worker:

Will use professional knowledge and experience to contribute to policy development.

Will apply knowledge and skills in ways that prioritize needs of others over personal gain.

Will responsibly use power and authority in ways that serve humanity. Bring to the attention of those in power and the general public, and where appropriate challenge ways, policies or activities of government, organizations or society that create structural disadvantages, hardships and suffering.

Will seek to change social structures which perpetuate inequalities and injustices and whenever possible work to eliminate all violations of human rights.

Will promote social fairness and equitable distribution of resources, aiming to minimize barriers and expand choice and potential for clients especially those who are disadvantaged, vulnerable or oppressed, or who have exceptional needs.

Will challenge the abuse of power for suppression and excluding people from decisions which affect them.

Will promote public participation in societal processes and decisions in the development and implementation of social policies and services,

3.2.1 Social work Institutions/organizations.

representatives to use this information, even if the information is legally required

Determining to whom clients wish such information to be given or not to be given, in what detail and in what circumstances.

Determining from whom information about clients may be requested

Treating information obtained from relatives or others about clients in the same confidential manner as clients' information.

Social workers will use confidential information only for the purpose for which it was acquired; or, with the written consent of the client, for a directly related purpose; or with lawful excuse (e.g. court or statutory requirement).

Social workers will ensure clients' anonymity and remove identifying details when permitted to use confidential information for purposes such as case presentation, consultation, teaching, research or education.

Respect the clients right to privacy and other confidentiality of any information provided in the course of the professional relationship

Inform the client of the extent to which any other professionals or employees will be able to access client's records

Inform the client about the extent of confidentiality and the uses of which the information held by the social worker may be put e.g. for compelling legal, ethical, or safety imperatives, any disclosure of information is required.

3.1.4 Informed consent

Social workers will ensure, as far as possible, that clients understand the principle of informed consent and the circumstances in which it may be required.

Obtain the informed consent of the client to any public disclosure for teaching, research or professional reasons, of information that may identify the client.

Ensure that if the client is unable to give informed consent because of an inability to comprehend the full ramifications of providing consent, the social worker must confirm that consent has been obtained from a person legally empowered to provide authority (where such a person exists)

3.15 Termination of relationship

Social workers will renegotiate or terminate professional relationships and services when these relationships and services no longer serve the interests or needs of clients. Whether the decision to renegotiate or terminate is that of clients or social workers, the reason for the decision will be considered and discussed. Social workers will also discuss with clients their needs, options and preferences before continuing or discontinuing services or offering to seek transfer or referral. The social worker will:

Act to protect the interest and needs of the client by facilitating a referral to an appropriate person or service if the social worker is obliged to terminate the relationship with the client for professional or personal reasons

Not undermine or damage the reputation and character of a social worker replaced because of professional circumstances

3.1.6 Research

In times of conducting a research, a social worker will:

Obtain approval from an appropriate body before undertaking a research project

Incorporate the ethical values inherent in the code of ethics in the methodologies used by the social worker in teaching or research

Obtain informed consent of the research participants and ensure that welfare and safety of research participants is protected

Protect the identity of research participants unless informed consent is gained to allow publication of identity where such publication would not infringe on the rights of any other person

Record and report research results fairly and objectively.

3.2 Social Justice

Human rights and social justice serve as the motivation and justification for social work. In solidarity with those who are disadvantaged, the profession strives to alleviate poverty safety imperatives, any disclosure of information is required.

3.1.4 Informed consent

Social workers will ensure, as far as possible, that clients understand the principle of informed consent and the circumstances in which it may be required.

Obtain the informed consent of the client to any public disclosure for teaching, research or professional reasons, of information that may identify the client.

Ensure that if the client is unable to give informed consent because of an inability to comprehend the full ramifications of providing consent, the social worker must confirm that consent has been obtained from a person legally empowered to provide authority (where such a person exists)

3.15 Termination of relationship

Social workers will renegotiate or terminate professional relationships and services when these relationships and services no longer serve the interests or needs of clients. Whether the decision to renegotiate or terminate is that of clients or social workers, the reason for the decision will be considered and discussed. Social workers will also discuss with clients their needs, options and preferences before continuing or discontinuing services or offering to seek transfer or referral. The social worker will:

Act to protect the interest and needs of the client by facilitating a referral to an appropriate person or service if the social worker is obliged to terminate the relationship with the client for professional or personal reasons

Not undermine or damage the reputation and character of a social worker replaced because of professional circumstances

3.1.6 Research

In times of conducting a research, a social worker will:

Obtain approval from an appropriate body before undertaking a research project

Incorporate the ethical values inherent in the code of ethics in the methodologies used by the social worker in teaching or research

Obtain informed consent of the research participants and ensure that welfare and safety of research participants is protected

Protect the identity of research participants unless informed consent is gained to allow publication of identity where such publication would not infringe on the rights of any other person

Record and report research results fairly and objectively.

3.2 Social Justice

Human rights and social justice serve as the motivation and justification for social work. In solidarity with those who are disadvantaged, the profession strives to alleviate poverty